Remaking Merkley and promoting downtown

Chamber luncheon covers a variety of 'growth' issues involving civic center, library & other projects

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

"Downtown" was the theme of the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce's monthly luncheon two weeks ago, held at the Margaret McDowell Manor for senior citizens.

Speakers touched on several downtown-related issues at the meeting, hosted by Chamber President Dan Ramos and Executive Director Don Hill. Highlights included:

■ A talk about future downtown development, presented by city community development director Stephen Patek. Patek said the city's downtown area was "stable, but poised for development," and then offered that "one of the questions I'm sure people want to ask is 'when the hell are we going to have the civic center done?' "

Patek reported that after plans to build a civic center next to the Arthur F. Turner library fell through, the city set its sights on a new West Capitol Ave. property it already owns.

"The new site may in fact be a better site," he reported. "We are looking at what will fit on that site." The city and its architect are looking at the new lot as a potential home for offices, a civic center, city council chambers, a senior center and a banquet room – or however many of these uses the land will hold.

"Maybe there's a better site downtown for a senior center," he ventured, and "we may have to postpone having a banquet room."

Patek also reported that a Walgreen pharmacy is still planned for the Jefferson Blvd./ Westacre Rd. intersection near La Bou, although "they don't seem to be in any hurry."

And he said that the city may soon venture into the realm of forming a "design review" commission, created to approve the look and layout of new development plans.

"We've had master plans adopted that say we want design review in the Triangle area (near the Tower Bridge), the commercial areas of Southport, and in the West Capitol Ave. plan," said Patek. "I've run a design review committee in a previous city, and it can do a lot of good and it can cause a lot of pain."

Patek added that new residential development in Southport will "create customers" for the city's downtown core area. Land use plans call for keeping the downtown area as "the primary shopping area for the city."

"I think over the next two or three years we'll see the first min-steps toward the revitalization of the downtown," he stated.

And Patek announced to the lunchtime crowd that as of July 1, the city had obtained possession of the former Highway 275 – the state highway that serves as the West Sacramento approach to the Tower Bridge. City officials are now working on plans to convert that highway to a surface street, making it an asset to the developing downtown areas north and south of it.

■ Jerry Smith, of Hollywood Hardware, made a presentation regarding the Chamber's plans to slow traffic on Merkley Ave. between Jefferson Blvd. and Westacre Rd.

Smith told the audience that the plan did not call for widespread street digging – and would avoid becoming a project similar to the redevelopment of Merkley east of Jefferson. In that project, street digging turned into a nightmare of project delays due to "surprise" utility lines and other problems.

"We're not going to have another Lake Merkley II," joked Smith.

Instead, he said, the Chamber has proposed that Merkley be reduced from four traffic lanes to two traffic lanes and one center turn lane. Under the plan, there will be diagonal parking on the south and parallel parking to the north. Planter-like constructions will further help narrow the road and slow traffic.

■ Helena Helmold of the West Sacramento Downtown Association reported that the association has come off a terrific year, with about 60 percent of assessed businesses paying their annual dues.

She added that the association is considering a change from a business assessment district to a property assessment district. If a "property-based improvement district" is approved, she said, downtown property owners would pay into an assessment district to fund local improvements. The district would have a five-year plan as well as a five-year lifespan. Such "PBIDs," she said, have produced good results in other Sacramento-area downtowns.

■ Mary Stephens, head Yolo County librarian, reported that a task force is under way to study how best to expand West Sacramento's Arthur F. Turner branch library. "We're really concerned that what we develop meets the needs of the community," she said.

Turner "was planned to serve a population of 17,000," said Stephens. West Sacramento's current population is about 30,000, and "we're looking at a population in 2020 of about 63,000."

ABOUT TOWN

By Daryl Fisher
Features Editor

Longtime West Sacramento resident Jeanne Kelly was born and raised in the steel town of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania.

"I grew up during the Great Depression," recalled Jeanne, "and jobs were very hard to come by back then. My father sold cars and insurance, but most people didn't have enough money to buy much of anything, so he would throw in free driving lessons with every sale. I can still remember how excited I was when I got my first job as a teletype operator for one of the steel companies. I was the first one in my high school graduating class of 41 students to get a job, and when they told me I would be making $108 a month, I was thrilled!"

Jeanne's ancestors on her father's side were Hessians who had been hired by Great Britain to fight on the side of the English during the American Revolution.

"They ended up getting captured by the Americans," explained Jeanne, "and when the war was over, they were let go and told to keep a low profile, so they moved to Pennsylvania and started their own families. To tell you the truth, though, my most interesting ancestor was actually an alchemist who was once hired by the King of Prussia to turn urine into gold, but apparently he wasn't very good at it."

In the early 1940s, Jeanne married Henry Kelly, whom she had known since they were preschoolers.

"He began sitting next to me at church and that was pretty exciting stuff back then," said Jeanne with a smile. "We had hardly been married, though, when World War Two sent us in different directions. Hank joined the Air Force and I joined the Womens Army Corp. He was sent to North Carolina and I was sent to Maryland for training. Before the war finally ended, he had been in Texas and Nebraska and I had spent time in Virginia and almost got assigned to the Pentagon. It was an exciting time to be young, though, and I have many good memories from those days."

After the war, Jeanne and Hank returned to Pennsylvania and went to college on the G.I. Bill, but it wasn't too long before they decided to move out west.

"I was really tired of living in a steel town," said Jeanne, "so when a good friend in California kept writing and telling me how great it was out there, we decided it was time to move. We were in Oroville for awhile, and that's where I saw an ad for new homes being built in Elkhorn Village. That was in 1957 and I have lived in the same house ever since."

For almost a quarter of a century, Jeanne taught in West Sacramento schools, including Elkhorn Village Elementary and Bryte Elementary, and also Golden State Junior High School.

"I really enjoyed the years I taught school," said Jeanne. "While in college, I studied puppetry, and I found that using puppets was a great way to help children learn their lessons. Take my word for it, you can teach a child anything if you have a puppet in your hand."

While Jeanne taught school and raised their two children, Hank worked in the hardware, glass, and paint businesses, but it was his much admired woodcarving talent which gave him the most pleasure.

> 'My most interesting ancestor was actually an alchemist who was once hired by the King of Prussia to turn urine into gold, but apparently he wasn't very good at it.'
> -- JEANNE KELLY

"Although he got started pretty late in life," said Jeanne, "my husband was very highly regarded in the woodcarving world. His carvings of wildlife and nature are truly beautiful and he took great pride in his work. He always wished he had started earlier and had more formal training, but just like everything he did with his hands, it just came very naturally to him."

With Hank's death in 1992, Jeanne decided that the best thing for her to do was stay busy.

"I've done volunteer work for the Friends of the Library, SPCA, and the VIP's," said Jeanne, "and I also go to the theater, ballet, and opera every chance I get. Music, especially classical music, has always been a very important part of my life. Plus I teach country music line dancing and I really enjoy that."

"Jeanne is very vivacious and probably has more energy than just about any person I know," said friend Barbara Jakosa Maich, who taught with Jeanne for many years. "And not only is she always on the go, she's also a great bridge player."

Ann Leibrock has known Jeanne since their children were little and she said, "When our husbands were alive, we all did quite a bit of traveling together, and spending time with Jeanne is always great fun. She's extremely honest, caring, reliable, and trustworthy, and she's been a dear friend for a very long time." "After my husband died," said Jeanne, "my relatives asked me if I wanted to move back to Pennsylvania, but I told them my life is in West Sacramento. I have always felt very comfortable here and I wouldn't think of leaving. It's been a great place to live and work and raise the children and I hope to be here for many more years to come."

Jeanne has two sons; Henry, who spent 22 years in the military after graduating from the Air Force Academy and who currently works in the education field in Indiana, and Matthew, who teaches music in the public schools of Seattle.

Never let the kids do the grocery shopping

By Daryl Fisher

(Editor's Note: Daryl has the week off from his column, but we bet you'll enjoy this one from a long time ago!)

The other evening my two oldest sons made the huge mistake of strolling into the kitchen and asking their mother, who was busy slaving away at the stove, what she was cooking for dinner. When she didn't immediately answer, one of them decided to add, "So, is it supposed to be a state secret or what?"

I happened to be only a few feet away and a big grin spread over my face as I patiently waited for the axe to fall.

"Food is for dinner," finally said my wife much more calmly than I thought she would. "I'm cooking food, just like I do every single night. Now would both of you please go and clean up. It's almost done."

"But what is it?" demanded Ty, not knowing when to leave good enough alone as usual.

"It's food!" repeated my wife with emphasis.

"It better not be chicken again," said Paul, bending over at the waist and attempting to peek inside the stove.

"If I was you guys," I mercifully interjected, "I'd get your butt out of here before someone gets smacked with a frying pan."

"But why can't she just tell us what she's cooking?" Ty whispered over to me.

"Because it's the one-hundredth-million time I've been asked that question!" said my wife, whose hearing is by far the best in the house.

"Oh, no," suddenly said Paul with horror on his face as he looked inside the stove, "it is chicken!"

"That does it!" shouted my wife. "All of you -- out!"

Once we were all safely out of the kitchen and in the living room, I calmly explained to my sons that their mother has prepared (she counted them all up one evening) more than 25,000 meals for her family over the years and that she no longer particularly enjoys being asked the question, 'Hey, what's for dinner tonight?'.

"She is also more or less sick to death of running over to the grocery store three or four times a week trying to find something you two picky eaters will actually put in your mouths," I added.

"But she knows we hate chicken," said Paul.

"Your mother makes great chicken," I said. "She can't help it if you guys hate just about everything that doesn't have sugar in it."

"But she never buys the stuff we like," said Ty.

"You mean she never buys the garbage you like," I said.

"I just don't get it," said Paul. "I mean, what can be so hard about shopping for food?"

"I tell you what," I volunteered heroically, "why don't I do the grocery shopping this week?"

"Oh, no, Dad," pleaded Ty, "please, that would be even worse! When you go shopping, you always buy liver, and tons of vegetables, and all that cheap generic stuff. I almost barfed after eating a bowl of those Sunny Select Honey Nut Tasteeos you brought home the last time you went grocery shopping."

"Then how about this," I suggested. "Why don't you two do the shopping this week?"

"You've got to be kidding?" asked Paul with a smile.

"Not at all," I assured them. "We'll give you fifty bucks to start with. If you do a good job, I'm sure your mother would be more than happy to hand the whole thing over to you."

"You got a deal!" said Ty. "When can we go?"

"Right after you finish your chicken dinner," I told them.

Later that night, obviously quite proud of how quickly they had done their shopping and equally pleased that they had managed to stay within five dollars of their budget, my two oldest sons marched into the house, grocery bags in hand.

"This grocery shopping business is a piece of cake," Ty assured his mother as he and his brother strutted into the kitchen and began to unload their haul.

The following list of nutritious food items is taken directly from the $55.19 Raley's sales strip (#0448-0006-0047) which Paul handed me: SSF Cookie Ice Cream; Dreyers Frn/Vanilla Wafers; Chips Ahoy Cookies; Dr. Pepper; A&W Root Beer; Classic Coke; Skippy Cream Peanut Butter; Dorito Macho Chips; Hostess Twinkies QTY 6; MM Fruit Punch; Hostess Ho-Ho's; SSF Krunch Bars; Choc Jello; Twizzlers Cherry; Apples Small Red; BV Lemon Pie QTY 6; Captain Crunch Cereal; Trix Cereal; Choc Coco Pebbles Cereal; Planters Peanuts; Hor Chili; SSF Choc Chip Ice Cream; Van de Kamps Fish Sticks; Betty Crocker Strawberry Swirl Cake; Oscar Mayer Bacon; Newtons Apple Cinnamon; Snapple Mango Madness.

"And do you know what's really neat about all the stuff we bought?" Ty asked his mother as she searched high and low to see if they had at least brought home the milk she asked them to get.

"What?" she asked, looking over at me as if I was a complete idiot for having turned them loose in a grocery store with fifty dollars.

"You're not even going to have to cook most of this, Mom. It's ready to eat!"

By Richard Novoa

The U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials were a great success for Sacramento breaking every track and field attendance record pushing the city to the top of the list for the 2004 trials. Sunday's attendance of 24,072 pushed the eight-day totals to 187,072- a sellout all eight days.

The new Mondo track surface at CSUS produced or tied 23 track and field records over the eight days of glory. The Sacramento Convention and Visitors Bureau estimated that the Trials brought between $13 and $15 million into the local economy when everything from hotels, food, car rentals, ticket sales and concession receipts are counted. Sacramento is on the Map!

The big showdown between Maurice Greene and Michael Johnson in the 200 meters turned into the most bizarre finishes in track history. Johnson, the 200-meter world record holder cramped up and fell down at 50 meters and Greene the reigning 200-meter world champion pulled up lame at about 150 meters. John Capel, a 21 year from the University of Florida, sprinted to the win and will represent the U.S.A. in the 200 meters. Greene, qualified for the team in the 100 meters and Johnson, who won the 400-meter are headed for Sydney, Australia in September. Johnson will retire from the 200 and focus on bringing home the gold in the 400 meters.

Stacy Dragila of Auburn broke her own record in the pole vault setting a world record of 15 feet, 2 ¼ inches. Dragila will be shooting at Sydney to be the first women to clear 16 feet. How about those Clark sisters in the 800 meters! Hazel Clark finished first, her sister-in-law Jearl Miles-Clark finished second and half-sister Joetta Clark took the third spot on the Olympic team. Gail Devers recorded 12.33 in the 100-meter hurdles, the fourth-fasted performance ever.

The NFL season starts this weekend with the Falcons visiting the Colts and the Saints at the New York Jets on Saturday. Then on Sunday, July 30th the Cowboys will play the Steelers while the Eagles visit the Cleveland Browns. On Monday the 49ers will play the Patriots in the Hall of Fame game in Canton, Ohio. The Oakland Raiders opened up the training camp in Napa (Napa Marriott Hotel) on July 21st. It's football season!!

The Giants (54-43) moved within one game of the division leading Arizona Diamondbacks. The Giants stumbled a little bit over the weekend losing their first series in month to the Dodgers. Manager Dusty Baker is doing a great job and has the players feeling good and believing they can make a run at the pennant. The Giants pitching is holding up while the hitters continue to lead the league in scoring.

The Oakland A's (53-45) are still struggling with their pitching staff in their pursuit of the division leading Seattle Mariners. The Mariners increased their lead over the A's this weekend to 5 games while the A's called up fresh troops from Sacramento. Oakland finally called up rookie sensation Barry Zito from the River Cats last week. Zito won his first major league game but not until he survived bases loaded inning with no outs. All Barry did was strike out the side. If he does it again, Zito will never return the River Cats!!

The River Gatos are home this week for a short four game home stand starting on Wednesday night against the Pirates Triple-A team, the Nashville Sounds. Crazy George will entertain the crowd on Friday night and Saturday is fireworks night at Raley Field. Tickets are still available by calling 447-HITS.

See ya next week!

Jean Depot: Pants & hats for every need

Linda Shaver, who along with her father, Al Zanussi, owns and operates West Sacramento's Jean Depot, has always loved the retail business.

"Twenty-eight years ago," explained Linda, "my mother, who had owned her own businesses ever since I can remember, bought the Cheapo Depot, which was in Broderick at that time. Her love for what she did kind of took hold in me and I really enjoyed spending time at the store and helping her. A year or so later, at my request, we changed the name, moved to our current location in the Country West Shopping Center on West Capitol Avenue and business got really good. We've been going strong ever since and I'm still having the time of my life."

When you talk to Linda, her enthusiasm for life in general and her work in particular makes it easy to see why many of her customers have been coming back for decades.

"We really care about our customers at the Jean Depot," said Linda, "plus if you need a great pair of pants, whether it's for work wear or western wear, we definitely have them. We sell all the quality brands, including Wrangler, Levi, Lee, and Carhartt. We also have the largest, most complete hat department in all of Northern California. Among many others, we carry Stetsons and Resistols and we also clean and block them. Our great hat selection is something we're very proud of here at the Jean Depot."

Linda feels that another one of the Jean Depots great strengths is the fact that it's a family business.

"My mother has always been so talented when it comes to clothes," said Linda, "and getting to work every day with my father is something I cherish. We have a wonderful relationship and he's especially good when it comes to selling suits and blazers and keeping the books in order. He knows most of our customers and that's one of the keys to being successful, that and just being here all the time. For a business like ours to continue to grow and prosper, it takes a hands-on approach and putting in lots of hours, and we're all committed to that."

LINDA SHAVER of the Jean Depot

A unique aspect of the Jean Depot is that about five years ago Linda decided to set aside a small part of the store to sell women's clothing on consignment.

"I just wanted to find a way to attract more women to the store," explained Linda, "and it's turned out to be a wonderful addition to the business. It's a great way for women who have gone up or down a size or two or who are just bored with something they've only worn once or twice to purchase something cute and different at a very reasonable price. Our women customers love it and best of all, it's tripled the business we do with them."

'Opening the Jean Depot was the most treasured idea my mother ever came up with.'
-- LINDA SHAVER

When Linda is away from the Jean Depot, most of her spare time is spent taking care of the numerous horses she either owns or boards on property she and her husband have in Elk Grove.

"I've got four horses of my own," said Linda, "and we board another 35 or so. There's simply nothing better than a great horse and I've been lucky enough to spend time with quite a few of them. I love everything about them -- the way they feel to the touch, their smell, how powerful they are. And they definitely have a way of revitalizing me after a hard day's work." With a big smile, she added, "Actually, a really good horse is just like a wonderful boyfriend or husband -- they'll do anything you ask them, spend as much time with you as you want, never hurt you, and they're also usually very pretty."

Over the years, Linda has really come to appreciate West Sacramento.

"I love having West Sacramento in my life," said Linda, "and opening the Jean Depot was the most treasured idea my mother ever came up with. Besides all my friends being here, this is also where I do my hair, get my clothes cleaned, and just about everything else. And on top of all that, the people are so nice and down-to-earth. It really is a great place to own a business and I plan on being here for a long, long time."

Linda and her husband, Craig, who works for Williams Communications, have two children. Nineteen-year-old Marcy is a college student who also works for a construction company, and seventeen-year-old Lisa is in charge of the family horse boarding business.

The Jean Depot is located at 3066 West Capitol Avenue and is open Monday through Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 6:00 p.m., and on Sundays from 11:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. The Jean Depot can also be reached by calling 372-5384.

Bits & pieces

Tomorrow's school board agenda correctly notes that there is a "general consensus" that the district's policy manual needs to be updated and revised.

Proceeding is a good idea. Although revision of a policy manual seems, on the surface, to be a boring and mundane project, it is not. In fact, past differences over policy have provided the local school board and administration with some of its more "Jerry Springer-ish" moments. Fixing some of these procedural gaps can help restore professionalism.

What, exactly, is the district's policy on student expulsion and suspension with regard to drugs or weapons? Who can put something on the school board's meeting agenda, and who can prevent something from being placed there? Can a board member obtain information on the district even if his or her colleagues try to block the request?

These are but a few questions that have generated friction in the current administration – mostly quite needlessly. With egos and past injustices checked at the door, the district' leaders should clear them up one at a time.

The West Sacramento Downtown Association is apparently moving forward again, following a period earlier this year when a quorum was hard to come by. Best of luck to it.

One detail needs to be corrected:

An association representative repeated (with the best of intentions) an inaccuracy at a recent luncheon. The official stated that the association's former newspaper, published in conjunction with a Sacramento newspaper company, was funded entirely by private money.

It wasn't. The association's consultant helped produce the newspaper. The consultant, in turn, was paid with public money. The newspaper was thus "subsidized."

It is true that the process of disclosing political contributions can be improved and speeded, especially in this era of the computer and the Internet. And it is true that "independent campaign committees," which can get around normal campaign contribution limits, are the single biggest potential threat to a level political playing field. That applies here in West Sacramento as well as elsewhere.

Unfortunately, a window of opportunity to deal with some of these issues has probably passed. It is difficult to discuss campaign reform issues in a meaningful way when the campaign season descends. Perhaps the issue can be taken up early in 2001, by the new city council or by interested citizens.

Letters to the Editor

Mayor's school commission a good idea

After returning from out of state for three weeks, I received the message that you had contacted me to ask my opinion about the recommendations by Mayor Cabaldon relating to his "blue ribbon commission on school excellence." I also returned just in time to learn the names of the persons named to the commission.

Although I did not get your message, I did learn about the mayor's recommendation and phoned him to tell him I thoroughly approve of the appointment of this committee. It is my opinion that the community must be more involved in the education of its children. The composition of the commission appears to be excellent and is one that should be able to take an impartial view of the activities of the district and meet the goals as articulated by the mayor.

I feel that for too many years citizens of this state and community have assumed that some school board members, a superintendent, a school principal, teachers, or some new program will by some "quick fix" be able to solve the problems of education. I, as well as many others involved in the educational process, will welcome the concern, interest and positive recommendations of the commission.

As one that has been in education since 1951 in this state and school district as well as others, I think the Washington Unified School District has a unique opportunity to make some improvements in education. A bond has been passed to improve school facilities, class size in the very important primary grades has been reduced, the State has adopted high standards and mandated frequent evaluations, and funding for education is higher than I have seen at anytime in the past fifty years.

WASHINGTON NEWS ITEMS

The Sacramento river registered 3 feet 2 inches U. S. gauge at the S. P. Bridge yesterday. Since the river reached this low stage the tide effects are noticable more and more every day and during the past week have been especially noticeable because of new moon effects in S. F. bay. Last Monday at high tide the river registered 4 feet 7 inches, or a raise of 1 foot and five inches. It is natural to assume that salt water backs up from the bay into the estuary north of Benicia to and including Antioch. As a matter of fact Benicia is not now taking water from the river for city use, but is sending barges upstream to load with fresh water at a point near Isleton and carrying it to the pumping works at the Benicia wharf.

Judge Barry has no more cases of "hop fiends" during the past week, although there are several still in the neighborhood of the M Street bridge, who have not been taken up by the police authorities. Judge Barry says that it is a very easy matter to crowd the Woodland jail with drug addicts to such an extent that another building would be necessary at the county seat to take care of the victims of prohibition.

The little baby of H. Steuben, 16 months old, was in a very dangerous condition yesterday as a result of a complication of measles, pneumonia and whooping cough. Little hope was extended by the family physician for the recovery of the child and the parents fear his loss any moment.

George Thomas has been very absentimous in his attendance in Sacramento for many months past; in fact, he had not visited the Capital City for six months until last Tuesday and unfortunately on the occasion of that visit last Tuesday afternoon he was mistaken for a bad check man and placed under arrest. While walking down Eighth Street to the Courthouse he was taken up by Detective Bill Hallinan and Verne Dill and was on his way to the City Jail in the patrol wagon when the real Thomas, the check passer, was found on the corner at Seventh and H Streets. George tried to offer explanations about mistaken identity but Hallinan threatened his with bodily injury if he didn't shut up and cease complaining. Hallinan said to him, "We knew you had been doing this for a long time and you did it very cleverly, too, but you mustn't forget the old saying, 'Be sure your sin will find you out.'" Thomas, familiarly known as Rosy, continued to protest until Dill threatened him with a "billie." It was only when the guilty party was seen standing at the corner of Seventh and H and placed under arrest that the Sacramento detectives apologized to Thomas for their mistake. Now Rosy Thomas vows that he will not visit the Capital City again for another year and has forced a promise on his wife that in the future she must do the family shopping.

Rube Lee has been appointed to a position of guard at the State Prison at Folsom and is about to move his family from Riverbank to Represa. WOMEN, GIRLS AND SCHOOL CHILDREN DO MOST OF FRUIT PACKING IN DELTA DISTRICT ALONG SACRAMENTO RIVER

Hood, July 16.—In the hope of creating a sentiment throughout the State in favor of the employment of white help in fruit packing and the exclusion of all Orientals from the fruit industry, fruit packing concerns in the delta district are hiring only white girls as sorters and packers.

The largest concern in this section to adopt this plan is the Hood Community Packing Sheds, employing at the present time fifty-four white girls and no Chinese or Japanese women. The total number of employes at the plant number more than ninety.

H. W. Vermilyea, manager of the plant, which is run on a co-operative basis to dispose of the fruit of fifteen delta growers, said that white girls are proving far more efficient than the Orientals and, while being paid slightly larger wages, are much cheaper in the long run.

Vermilyea added:

"We are doing this with the idea of promoting a sentiment throughout the State of California to do away with Oriental labor and employ white help entirely. During the past few years, the use of Asiatic labor on fruit and vegetables crops became so prevalent that the growers soon found they had to rely on Orientals completely. Caucasian laborers had gone elsewhere to work. This gave the Japanese and Chinese a strangle hold on the growers, and as soon as they came to realize their strength, they boosted their wages accordingly.

"We decided that the only way to do away with this condition was to employ white girls exclusively. We had some difficulty in breaking them in, and found it necessary to import expert packers from the northern counties, and as far south as the Imperial Valley to help out during the first of the pack.

"Now, however, the girls are doing splendidly. The fruit is more perfectly sorted and more capably packed, and production is speeded throughout. We are training local girls in the work and expect to have no trouble at all next year. The daughters of some of the most prominent ranchers in this section are working in the plant, not because they need the money but because they feel there is a sentiment attached to it."

Vermilyea said the plant was now turning out more than 3,000 boxes, or six carloads, daily of pears and plums for shipment to Eastern markets where they are sold in carload lots.

The Joe E. Green estate, at Courtland, is said to be the first to successfully try out the plan. No Japanese or Chinese women have been employed in sorting or packing there for five years. Twenty-four white girls are employed in the packing sheds.

On the N. E. Dean ranch at Court-white girls having replaced the Or-white girls having replaved the Orientals employed by the predecessors of the present owners.

Mrs. Dean said that they found no trouble on either the Green or Dean ranches in securing a sufficient number of white girls to handle the output. The number of applicants exceed the number of positions open.

SCHOOL HOUSE MOVED FROM RIVERVIEW TO NEW LOCATION

Last Monday the moving of the school building in the Sacramento River District from Riverview station to the new location on the County Highway near the Catholic church was completed.

The work was done by George Thomas and a force of housemovers without mishap to the building. The remarkable thing about this old building was the great weight in the material that made up the structure. It was built many years ago when structures of this kind were built to last, and, although its appearance would indicate that it might collapse at an early date, the housemovers experienced no difficulty in moving it up and down grades and even across a railroad embankment.

The building measures 30x48 feet, and, being ceiled on the inside with tongue and groove material, could stand a great deal of abuse.

It is understood that the school trustees will simply add to this building after it has been placed on a solid foundation and use the funds voted by the people for that purpose. Bids are being now asked by the school trustees for the additional structure and specifications have been made and are on file with the superintendent of schools in Woodland and with the trustees of the district.

HALF OF PRISONERS IN YOLO JAIL ARE DRUG USERS

Woodland, July 13.—Seventy-two prisoners have been placed in the Yolo county jail since the first of the year, according to Robert W. Woods, who keeps the accounts of the county institution. Of this number 34, or nearly 50 per cent, have been incarcerated for either distributing or using narcotics. A fair percentage of them have been women, either young girls or verging on middle life. The men have been from all nationalities and races, particularly Caucasians.

With the addition of two more arrests for violation of the narcotic act yesterday, there are now in the county jail here 23 prisoners of whom 19 are in for long terms verging on six months each, all charged with grievious violations of the drug act. It is impossible to find jail facilities for all drug law violators.

Young men are very careless.
They forget that the higher they fly the harder will be their fall.

SUCCESSFUL SALE OF THOROUGHBRED HORSES MADE IN EAST

Dr. D. F. Herspring returned from the Eastern States last Monday, where he had sold 16 head of thoroughbred harness horses, trotters and pacers at a very good figure.

Dr. Herspring has been making these trips East for several years past and made it a point to get to the Aurora, Ill., racetrack in time for the annual meet there.

He says that the best sale he ever had in the past ten years was that just finished, securing for him some fancy prices, better than he had ever secured before.

Several of the horses taken East on this trip by Dr. Herspring were sired by Jim Logan, but the one that brought the best price was a stud by ePter McKylo, a stallion formerly owned by Leavitt Todhunter of Washington.

Dr. Herspring said that the demand for good horses is as active now as it has been in many years past but the demand for plugs is practically nil.

He intends to take another carload early next spring to the Eastern markets.

NO OBJECTIONS TO COUNTY ASSESSMENTS

An unusual incident of the recent meeting of the Yolo supervisors as a Board of Equalization was that there was an absence of protestants. Not a single objection was made to the county assessments, nor were any changes suggested.
